I think the proposed new management plan is ridiculous. Boater access should be unlimited. Conflicts between boaters and fishermen will be few, if ever, because water levels will dictate when each activity is acceptable. Low water, with good visibility is good for fishing, but it would be impossible to navigate the river at those flows. In contrast, when water levels are good for boating, it would be dangerous for wading and too cloudy to fish.

What is the real reason behind keeping paddlers off the Chattooga?
