

Following ANCIENT TRAILS

photo by Stephanie Jay Lundford

Ramshorn Mountain from Wagon Gulch

photo by Deb Robinson

Pinnacles Mountain in the fall.

photo by Debra Robinson

Snowfall on Pinnacles Mountain

photo by Deb Robinson

Petroglyph from need the area where this came from...

LEGEND

- Wyoming Centennial Byway
- Highways
- Seasonal Use Gravel Road
- Wyoming Scenic Byway
- (all routes) Folsom/Clovis Man ca. 10,000 BC
- Shoshone and Crow Trails 1700-1860
- John Colter 1807
- Astorians, westbound Hoback, Robinson, Reznor 1811
- Rob Stuart, Astorian, eastbound, 1812
- Jedediah Smith and Fur Trappers, Gros Ventre Indians 1823-1840
- President Chester A. Arthur 1883

Mileages
Yellowstone National Park	73
Dubois	10
Jackson	76
Pinedale	153

Along the Road

U.S. Highway 26/287 crosses the Continental Divide and heads west to Grand Teton National Park and Yellowstone National Park. This drive offers a little-known and real-life patch of the legendary West with spectacular views. Along the way, stop in at the local guest ranches or lodges for an overnight stay.

The highway winds through broad valleys, pine forests, and mountain scenes to the summit, where the Pinnacles—a series of jagged peaks—rise to crown the ridge and beyond to the Continental Divide at Togwotee Pass (elevation 9,658 feet). You might see patches of snow at the divide!

Safety in Bear Country

Hike in groups and make noise. Bears don't like surprises. Carry bear spray and know how to use it.

Secure food, trash, and other attractants in a bear-resistant container, hang 10 feet high, or store in a hard-sided vehicle. All attractants must be stored at night or when unattended during the day. Ask about special regulations for harvested big game.

Human-food conditioned bears are bold and often must be destroyed.

