

Things to See and Do in JACKSON HOLE

photo courtesy Double H Bar

National Elk Refuge

For a winter wildlife viewing adventure, take a ride on a horse-drawn sleigh. In other seasons, enjoy fly fishing, hunting, natural history programs, and the historic Miller Ranch.

Jackson National Fish Hatchery

Established in 1950, the hatchery raises fish to mitigate fish losses from water development projects.

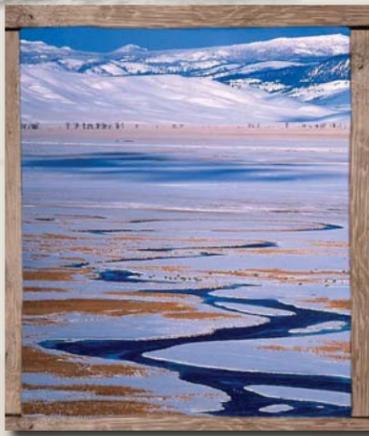

photo by Scott McKinley

Bridger Teton National Forest

The 3.4 million-acre Bridger-Teton National Forest is known for wildlife, wildlands, and watersheds. Year-round recreation opportunities abound, via foot, horse, raft, bike, skis, snowshoe, dog-sled, snowmobile, or car.

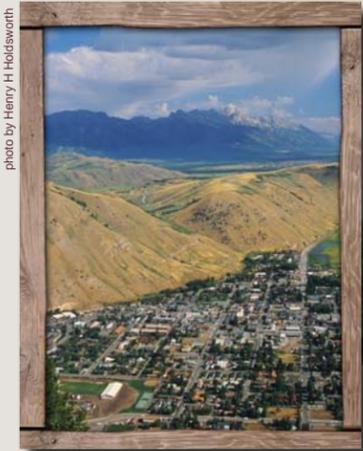

photo by Henry H Holdsworth

courtesy of Museum of Jackson Hole

To the left Jackson today, above, Jackson in 1907 by W.M. Trester.

photo by Daniel Armstrong

Grand Teton National Park

Grand Teton National Park encompasses some of the oldest dude ranches and homesteads in Jackson Hole, and protects a rugged landscape punctuated by an awe-inspiring mountain range. The park is home to moose, pronghorn, elk, grizzly bears, and more.

Town of Jackson

During every season the Town of Jackson has something for everyone. From culture and the arts, dining and shopping, outdoor recreation and wildlife viewing, you are sure to have fun-filled days and nights. Our historic Town Square welcomes you!

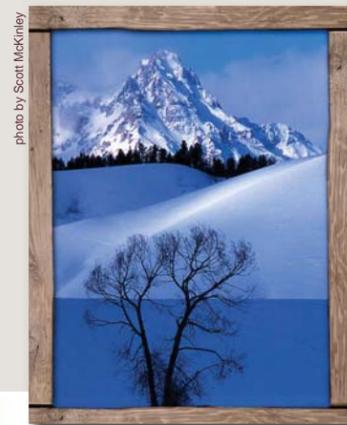

photo by Scott McKinley

Jackson Hole Historical Society

The Museum of Jackson Hole tells the rich history of this western valley, from Native Americans, fur trappers, and homesteaders, to cattle and dude ranching, skiing, and mountaineering. Historic photographs are featured in the museum's research center.

courtesy of Museum of Jackson Hole

Bringing the cows in at Triangle X Ranch by Harrison Crandall.

Arts and Culture

Jackson Hole has a strong arts and cultural scene, recognized especially for our western and wildlife arts. Visit Jackson's arts center and galleries, national museum, Broadway-ready theatre, international film festival, or the summer music festival.

