Josephine County, Oregon

Josephine County is located in southwestern Oregon and was created by the Territorial Legislature on January 22, 1856, from the western half of Jackson County. It was the nineteenth, and last, county created before statehood. In 1886, the county seat was relocated to Grants Pass, a new town on the railroad that was completed through Oregon that same year. Grants Pass is now the departure point for most Rogue River scenic waterway guided fishing and boat trips. The Illinois River, one of the Rogue's tributaries, has also been designated a scenic waterway. The county covers 1,641 square miles and has approximately 70,000 residents. Tourism, recreation, forest products, electronics and software are primary industries in Josephine County.
