

Figure 2–8.—Old-growth tropical forests are felled and commonly burned rather than harvested because they are remote from markets, and the purpose is not to obtain their wood but rather to use their soil for food production.