

National Forests and Climate Change

How well are our national forests and grasslands responding to climate change?

Starting this year, each national forest and grassland will be tracking progress using a new 10-point scorecard. The Forest Service's research branch along with regional and national programs will provide support for this agency-wide effort.