INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is a comprehensive listing of domestic articles and research papers, as well as foreign research papers, about forest cooperatives. The compilation was made in conjunction with and as a byproduct of a formal socio-economic analysis of forestry associations. The articles concern, directly or indirectly, the activities of cooperative associations formed by forest landowners to market timber and timber products.

One section contains selected references to recent literature about the economics of cooperatives. Though these publications describe neither forestry cooperatives nor primary industry marketing problems, an understanding of the theoretical and legal aspects involved and a knowledge of alternative marketing methods—as exemplified by comparable organizations—are of utmost importance to any serious consideration of the cooperative business enterprise.

This bibliography is a sequel to Cooperative Marketing of Forest Products, compiled in 1939 by Mildred H. Williams, U. S. Forest Service librarian. The author is indebted to Miss Williams for her comprehensive research of literature for the years prior to 1939. Without her help this paper would be seriously deficient.
